Programs Offered

The Laney Graduate School offers five research-based master's degrees and 37 doctoral degrees in programs across the humanities, the social, biomedical, and natural sciences, public health, nursing, and business. The Laney Graduate School is the standard bearer of excellence committed to the creation of new knowledge. We foster intellectual cooperation among the arts and sciences, business, law, theology and the health sciences to advance the frontiers of knowledge, to contribute to the solution of important public problems, and to train the next generation of intellectual leaders.

All doctoral students participate in the Teaching Assistant Training and Teaching Opportunity (TATTO) program, which provides a gradual introduction to college-level teaching. TATTO embodies the University's commitment to excellence in teaching.

The Laney Graduate School supports a number of interdisciplinary PhD programs, several of which rank among the top-rated interdisciplinary programs in the nation. Among these are the Graduate Division of Biological and Biomedical Sciences, the Graduate Division of Religion, and the program in Women's Studies.

The Laney Graduate School, in collaboration with schools and units across Emory's campus and with area institutes, offers to its graduate students a number of unique opportunities that promote cross-disciplinary training, interdisciplinary research and public scholarship. These programs bring graduate students from all disciplines in contact with each other and with faculty from the humanities, social sciences, and sciences to work with health care professionals, community leaders and researchers and scholars from across the country. Included among these programs are the Center for Mind, Brain and Culture, the Office University and Community Partnerships, the Atlanta Clinical and Translational Science Institute, the Fox Center for Humanistic Inquiry, and many more.

The areas of study with the largest enrollment are the Graduate Division of Biological and Biomedical Sciences, the Graduate Division of Religion, and Chemistry.

CANDLER SCHOOL OF THEOLOGY

Established 1914

Total Living Alumni 7,252

Historical Dates

1914 – In the aftermath of a court case severing the relationship of Vanderbilt University and the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, the church decides to found a university east of the Mississippi River. Asa G. Candler, founder of Coca-Cola, gives $1 million to found the school and the church's educational commissioners choose Atlanta for the university's location and name Bishop Warren Candler chancellor. The School of Theology opens at Wesley Memorial Church in September.

1915 – The School is named the Candler School of Theology in honor of Bishop Candler.

1916 – The School reopens on the Druid Hills campus in the building now housing the Pitts Theology Library. Students' annual expenses, including board, books, laundry, and $21 for heat and lights, are $187.

1922 – Theology faculty vote to begin admitting women. No women actually graduate from Candler until 1938.

1935 – The School extends admission to students from denominations other than Methodist.

1946 – Candler becomes the largest Methodist seminary in the country.

1947 – For the first time, Candler students are charged tuition: $100.

1956 – Collaborating with the Emory College Department of Religion, the School forms the Graduate Division of Religion.

1957 – Construction and dedication of Bishops Hall

1958 – Ad Hoc faculty committee urges Trustees to consider desegregation.

1965 – Candler becomes desegregated.

1974 – Candler enrolls its first Master of Theological Studies degree students.

1975 – The University purchases the 220,000-volume collection of the Hartford Seminary, making Pitts Library the second-largest theology library in the country.

1981 – The William R. Cannon Chapel and Religious Center is consecrated.

1984 – The Aquinas Center is founded.

1984 – More than 46% of United Methodist pastors in the Southeast are Candler graduates.

2001 – 500,000th accession to the Pitts Library and 20th anniversary of Cannon Chapel are celebrated.

2007 – Appointment of the School’s first female dean, Dr. Jan Love.

2007 – Construction begins for a LEED certified state-of-the-art class and office building.

2008 – New theology building dedicated in September.

2009 – Opening of the Swanson Art Collection at Candler School of Theology. A noted Los Angeles artist whose works hang in such prestigious venues as the Smithsonian Institution, the Vatican Museums, and the Tate Gallery in London, John August Swanson is regarded for his finely detailed and brilliantly colored paintings and original prints. With more than 50 pieces, Candler holds the largest collection of Swanson’s work.

THEOLOGY

Programs Offered

The School of Theology offers programs leading to Master of Divinity, Master of Theological Studies, Master of Theology, and Doctor of Theology degrees, and provides continuing education opportunities for clergy, church professionals, and laypersons. Degree programs associated with the School of Theology include joint degree programs with the Goizueta Business School, the Emory Law School, the Rollins School of Public Health, and the Laney Graduate School (the Master of Sacred Music degree). Many of Candler’s faculty also serve on the faculty of the Graduate Division of Religion’s PhD program. In addition, the School offers an MPH via distance education, a 5-year BA/MSPH program with Emory College, and a Masters of Science in Clinical Research in conjunction with the School of Medicine. Continuing education programs in a variety of disciplines are offered throughout the year.

The School of Public Health, through the Graduate School, offers doctoral programs in Epidemiology, Biostatistics, Behavioral Sciences and Health Education, Health Policy and Health Services Research and collaborates with the School of Medicine in offering a doctoral degree in Nutrition and Health Sciences.

YERKES NATIONAL PRIMATE RESEARCH CENTER

Established 1930

Historical Dates

YERKES

1930 – Yale psychobiologist Robert M. Yerkes, PhD, founded the Yale Anthropoid Experiment Station, later known as the Yale Laboratories of Primate Biology. Following Yerkes' retirement, the center was renamed in his honor.

1956 – Yale University transferred ownership of the Yerkes Laboratory of Primate Biology to Emory University.

1960 – Congress passed legislation creating the National Institutes of Health's Regional Primate Research Centers program to provide the scientific community with specialized resources needed for primate research. The next year, Emory and six other research universities were selected as sites for the regional primate research centers.

1965 – Federal funding enabled Emory to construct primate housing, lab and support facilities on its main campus and at a satellite location in Lawrenceville, Georgia. This same year, the Yerkes Research Center moved to Atlanta and has served ever since as a focal point for cross-disciplinary collaboration in research both within Emory and with affiliated scientists at other institutions across the country and the world.

1985 – The Yerkes Research Center received full accreditation from The Council on Accreditation of the Assessment and Accreditation of Laboratory Animal Care International (AAALAC), the gold standard of laboratory animal care. Yerkes has maintained full AAALAC accreditation for 24 consecutive years.

1999 – The Yerkes facility was expanded to accommodate the newly established Emory Vaccine Center, to facilitate vaccine development and research in AIDS, malaria, anthrax, hepatitis C and other diseases. This same year, the Yerkes Research Center became the first home for the Center for Behavioral Neuroscience (CBN), a collaborative resource for fostering innovative research on the basic neurobiology of complex social behaviors associated with fear, aggression, affiliation and reproduction.

2001 – The DNA vaccine microbiologist Harriet Robinson, PhD, developed was shown to prevent development of AIDS in monkeys infected with a highly virulent form of HIV. Today, this vaccine is in clinical trials in humans. This same year, memory expert Stuart Zola, PhD, came to Emory from UC San Diego to become director of the Yerkes Research Center.

2002 – The NIH designated the Yerkes Research Center and seven other primate research centers as national primate research centers (NPRCs) in recognition of their involvement with and impact on research programs throughout this country and the world.

2003 – The Yerkes Research Center became a critical component of the Southeastern Regional Center of Excellence for Emerging Infections and Biodefense, a federally funded initiative to develop new vaccines, drugs and diagnostic tests against emerging infections and to defend against organisms that might be used in bioterrorist attacks.

2004 – The Yerkes Research Center opened a new 92,000-square-foot neuroscience research facility, certified LEED Silver, with state-of-the-art lab and imaging facilities. The Yerkes Research Center is the only NPRC to have onsite MRI, PET and cyclotron facilities. The center has invested more than $3 million in imaging capabilities to facilitate neuroscience research projects involving studies of anatomy, physiology and function.

2005 – The Yerkes Research Center celebrated its 75th anniversary of advancing science and improving health.

2007 – The National Institute of Aging granted Yerkes researchers more than $10 million during a five-year period to compare changes that occur in normal aging humans, humans with Alzheimer’s disease and humans with mild cognitive impairment to changes that occur in nonhuman primates. The goal is to identify ways to diagnose aging-related diseases earlier in order to increase the chances for effective treatment as well as to develop new treatments based on specific physiological changes. This is the largest grant Yerkes has ever received.

2008 – In the first study of its kind, Yerkes researchers developed the first transgenic nonhuman primate model of Huntington’s disease (HD). This development is expected to lead to greater understanding of the underlying biology of HD and to the development of potential therapies. This same year, Yerkes opened the new Clinical Veterinary Medicine Administration and Research Building (CVMAR) at its Lawrenceville field station. The CVMAR, certified LEED Gold, is the cornerstone for new programs using social colonies of genetically typed nonhuman primates to help researchers understand the interaction between genetics and environment and the roles they play in human health and disease.

2009 – Yerkes Researchers discovered a compound used to diagnose Alzheimer’s disease in humans may also be useful in determining why humans develop the disease and other primates do not. The study has moved the scientific community another step closer to understanding why age-related neurodegenerative diseases, such as Alzheimer’s disease, are uniquely human and is providing new insights into potential therapeutic targets for these disorders.

Research Programs

For nearly eight decades, the Yerkes National Primate Research Center, Emory University, has been dedicated to conducting essential basic science and translational research to advance scientific understanding and to improve the health and well-being of humans and nonhuman primates. Today, the center, as one of only eight National-Institutes of Health-funded national primate research centers, provides leadership, training and resources to foster scientific creativity, collaboration and discoveries. Yerkes-based research is grounded in scientific integrity, expert knowledge, respect for colleagues, an open exchange of ideas and compassionate quality animal care.

Within the fields of microbiology, immunology, neuroscience and psychobiology, the center’s research programs are seeking ways to: develop vaccines for infectious and noninfectious diseases, such as AIDS and Alzheimer’s disease; treat cocaine addiction; interpret brain activity through imaging; increase understanding of progressive illnesses such as Parkinson’s and Alzheimer’s; unlock the secrets of memory; determine behavioral effects of hormone replacement therapy; and advance knowledge about the evolutionary links between biology and behavior.

UNIVERSITY LIBRARIES

Historical Dates

1897 – Construction of (Warren Akin) Candler Library, first separate library on original campus at Oxford, Georgia.

1911 – Purchase of first significant collection of rare books and manuscripts, a collection of books and papers associated with John Wesley and his family.

1926 – Opening of (Asa Griggs) Candler Library, first separate library on new Atlanta campus.

1969 – Opening of the Robert W. Woodruff Library, the first library building at Emory since 1926, providing capacity for more than a million volumes.

1972 – One-millionth volume is added to the University's libraries.

1975 – Purchase of the 220,000-volume collection of the Hartford Seminary moves Pitts Theology Library into the front ranks of America's theology libraries

1975 – Beginning of automated cataloging for Emory libraries with advent of OCLC and SOLINET.

1976 – Pitts Theology Library expands into renovated space, occupying the entire original Theology Building.

1979 – Acquisition of the W.B. Yeats collection, Woodruff Library's first step in building world-class poetry and modern literary archives.

1987 – Two-millionth volume is added to the University's library holdings.

1987 – Creation of the Health Sciences Library, bringing together medical and dental libraries in a new location.

1987 – Debut of DOBIS, Emory libraries first automated integrated library system.

1994 – Launch of Virtual Library Project, marking the beginning of Emory libraries' digital projects and programs.

1995 – Opening of the Hugh F. MacMillan Law Library.

1995 – Conversion of integrated library system from DOBIS to EUCLID.

1997 – Appointment of Woodruff Library's first African-American bibliographer, recognizing the Library's distinctive and growing archival and special collections in African-American culture.

1998 – Dedication of the Center for Library and Information Resources, a major addition to the Woodruff Library.

2001 – Dedication of the Marian K. Heilbrun Music and Media Library on Level 4 of the Center for Library and Information Resources.

2002 – Opening of the Mathematics and Science Center Library.

2003 – Reopening and dedication of the renovated Asa G. Candler Library, featuring the newly restored William L. Matheson Reading Room.

2004 – Acquisition of the Raymond Danowski Poetry Library, the largest collection of modern English-language poetry ever assembled by a private collector (some 70,000 volumes).

2006 – Acquisition of literary archive of Salman Rushdie.

2007 – Acquisition of archives of Pulitzer Prize-winner Alice Walker.

2008 – Southern Christian Leadership Conference (SCLC) places archive at Emory.

Information About Libraries

The Libraries of Emory University include the Robert W. Woodruff Library, as well as libraries for health sciences, law, theology, business and Oxford College. Holdings of the Emory Libraries total approximately 3.4 million print and electronic volumes, more than 50,000-plus electronic journals, and internationally renowned special collections including more than 20,000 linear feet of manuscripts and archives.

Emory’s Manuscript, Archives and Rare Book Library (MARBL) offers rich collections in areas such as the Irish literary revival, 20th Century American, British and Irish poetry, and African-American literature, history and culture. MARBL also is strong in research collections devoted to the social and cultural history of the American South, with a particular emphasis on Georgia and Atlanta.

The libraries offer access to thousands of electronic information resources, including in-house digital innovations such as The Trans-Atlantic Slave Trade Database (<http://www.slavevoyages.org>), the Internet journal Southern Spaces (www.southernspaces.org), and the Global Health Chronicles (<http://globalhealthchronicles.org>).

LIBRARIES

Pitts Theology Library, the third-largest theology library in the country, is home to the Richard C. Kessler Reformation Collection. The Woodruff Health Sciences Center Library includes branches at Grady Hospital and Emory Hospital. Emory University’s Hugh F. MacMillan Law Library is a selective depository for U.S. government documents, and is a full depository for publications of the European Union.

The Emory Libraries are members of the Association of Research Libraries, OCLC, the Research Libraries Group, the Center for Research Libraries, the Coalition for Networked Information, and the Digital Library Federation. For more information about the libraries and strategic plan, visit <http://web.library.emory.edu>.

UNIVERSITY TECHNOLOGY SERVICES

Historical Dates:

1965 – “Emory Biomedical Data Processing and Analysis Center” (EBDPAC) established with a mission to support biomedical research.

1968 – Center renamed the “Emory University Computing Center” (EUCC) with a university-wide mission.

1971 – Installation of a remote access timesharing computer (RCA Spectra/70).

1973 – An academically focused “Scientific and Instructional Computing Group” established within EUCC.

1982 – The growth of early desktop computer use on campus leads to formation of a Microcomputing Support Group within EUCC.

1986 – Establishment of first IT Help Desk.

1987 – EUCC builds custom “Emory XT” and “Emory AT” desktop computers.

1988 – Position of “Vice Provost for IT” created.

1989 – Renamed ITD (Information Technology Division) with merger of “EUCC”, “Telecommunications” and “Multimedia Communications”.

1990 – Opening of the “Faculty Information Technology Center”, a joint project of ITD and the University Libraries.

1994 – The Biology Department’s “Project LearnLink” merges into ITD.

1995 – First Emory University website goes live.

2002 – The Computing Center at Cox Hall opens.

2005 – Position of “Chief Information Officer” (CIO) created.

2008 – UTS completes major reorganization to meet future needs of Emory.

About UTS:

University Technology Services (UTS) enables Emory to teach, learn, and innovate by providing stable information technology services. UTS provides enterprise services to Emory University and Emory Healthcare including administrative applications (PeopleSoft), email and calendaring (Exchange), and 24 hour support services (call center and data center). UTS also provides telephone, wireless and wired data networking, paging, cable television, and radio and video services to the Emory enterprise.

Additionally, UTS provides many academically focused technology resources and applications (BlackBoard) and support for over 100 technology enriched classrooms. UTS's computing centers and labs include Emory's award-winning Center for Interactive Teaching (ECIT). Collaborative work is enabled for students and faculty in the Computing Center at Cox Hall.

UTS is organized into the following groups:

- Call Center
- Enterprise Services
- Infrastructure
- Enterprise Applications
- Academic Services
- Integration
- Project Management
- IT Service Management

Information on UTS Services:
