Programs Offered

The Laney Graduate School offers five master's degrees and 36 doctoral degrees in programs across the humanities, the social, biomedical, and natural sciences, public health, nursing, and business. The Laney Graduate School is the standard bearer of excellence committed to the creation of new knowledge. We foster intellectual cooperation among the arts and sciences, business, law, theology and the health sciences to advance the frontiers of knowledge, to contribute to the solution of important global problems, and to train the next generation of intellectual leaders.

Doctoral students also have access to a range of professionalization support, including a Professional Development Support program that supports conference attendance, specialized training, and research, and a Grant Writing Program that offers information sessions for students at all stages of their careers, and several working sessions for students developing grant or post-doc proposals. All doctoral students participate in the Teaching Assistant Training and Teaching Opportunity (TATTO) program, which provides a gradual introduction to college-level teaching. TATTO embodies the University's commitment to excellence in teaching.

The Laney Graduate School's English as a Second Language program provides language assessment and support classes to international students admitted to the Graduate School.

The Laney Graduate School supports a number of interdisciplinary PhD programs, several of which rank among the top-rated interdisciplinary programs in the nation. Among these are the Graduate Division of Biological and Biomedical Sciences, the Graduate Division of Religion, and the program in Women's Studies.

The Laney Graduate School, in collaboration with schools and units across Emory's campus and with area institutes, offers to its graduate students a number of unique opportunities that promote cross-disciplinary training, interdisciplinary research and public scholarship. These programs bring graduate students from all disciplines in contact with each other and with faculty from the humanities, social sciences, and sciences to work with health care professionals, community leaders and researchers and scholars from

ROLLINS SCHOOL OF PUBLIC HEALTH

Established 1990

Total Living Alumni 5,246

Historical Dates

September 19, 1975 – Emory President James T. Laney and the University’s Board of Trustees approve the Master of Community Health program and degree under the School of Medicine. Constance Conrad, MD, MPH, is selected as the first director and the first cohort of 16 students is admitted.

1978 – Emory’s Community Health Program receives accreditation.

1982 – Eugene J. Gangarosa, MD, MPH, becomes Director of the Master of Community Health Program.

1983 – Emory changes its degree title from a Master of Community Health to a Master of Public Health.

1988- MPH program moves to the new American Cancer Society Building located at 1599 Clifton Road.

1989 – The Public Health Program is elevated to Division status within the Woodruff Health Sciences Center.

September 13, 1990 – Emory’s Board of Trustees grant school status to the Division of Public Health and appoint Raymond Greenberg, MD, PhD, MPH, its founding dean.

1990 – First endowed chair – Jules and Uldeen Terry Chair in Maternal Health – Dr. Carol J.R. Hogue.

1990 – Biostatistics Consulting Center is established to support investigators across the University and Woodruff Health Sciences Center.

1990 – First Virginia S. DeHaan Lecture in Health Education and Promotion

1991 – The RSPH Alumni Association is founded.

1991 – Founding Advisory Board is established.

1992 – The School is accredited by the Council on Education for Public Health (CEPH). The Women's and Children's Center (WCC) is founded as a focal point for training and research in maternal and child health and women's health.

1992 – Eugene J. Gangarosa Scholarship Fund established – 1st endowment for Global Field Experiences.

1993 – In collaboration with the School of Medicine, the School establishes the Center for Injury Control.

1993 – First RSPH Career Fair.

1994 – Founding Advisory Board name is changed to Community Advisory Board.

1994 – To recognize the long-term support of the Rollins family for Emory University, the School officially becomes the Rollins School of Public Health (RSPH).

December 1994 – The School moves into its new home, the Grace Crum Rollins Building.

1995 – First Visit Emory Day.

1995 – James W. Curran, MD, MPH, is named dean.

1996 – The RSPH Dean's Council is established to replace the Community Advisory Board. In collaboration with the Graduate School of Arts and Sciences and Emory College, the Center for Health, Culture, and Society (CHCS) is founded. The CHCS encourages interdisciplinary and comparative approaches to public health problems.

1996- MD/MPH joint degree program is formally established.

1996 – Career Services office established.

1997 – William Foege joins RSPH as Presidential Distinguished Professor of International Health.

1998 – Emory gains designation as a National Institutes of Health Center for AIDS Research (CFAR). The Center supports investigations in HIV/AIDS research across the University.

1999 – Edmund S. Muskie Fellowship and Masters International Program with the Peace Corps are established.

2000 – The School initiates the Career MPH Program for experienced health professionals through two on-campus sessions per semester with intervening Web-based instruction. The School graduates its 2,000th student as it celebrates its 25th anniversary as a program at Emory.

2001 – The Center on Health Outcomes and Quality (CHOQ) is established. Incorporating a former unit of Aetna, the CHOQ produces research-based knowledge and methods to help health plans, physicians, and hospitals enhance the quality and cost-effectiveness of patient care.

2001 – With support from the American Cancer Society, Legacy Foundation and Robert Wood Johnson Foundation, the School establishes the Tobacco Technical Assistance Consortium to assist organizations in states across the country in building and growing highly effective tobacco control programs.

2002 – With a gift from O. Wayne Rollins Family Foundation, the Center for Public Health Preparedness and Research (CPHPR) is established. The Center provides training and research opportunities to students and faculty that would improve the public health capacity to prevent and to respond to emerging infectious disease threats, including the threat of bioterrorism.

2002 – The Bill and Melinda Gates Foundation makes its first endowment gift to establish the William H. Foege Global Health Fellowship program.

2002 – The Center for Global Safe Water is established as a partnership among Emory University, CARE USA, the CDC and Population Services International. Its mission is to improve access to safe drinking water globally through applied research, evaluation and training activities.

2002 – Rosalynn Carter Chair in Mental Health is established as the first endowed chair for mental health in the U.S. and first joint appointment with The Carter Center.

2003 – Center for Throughput Experimentation, Design and Analysis is established to assist Emory researchers actively engaged in data-intensive investigations resulting from Micro-Array experiments.

2003 – The School graduates its 3,000th student.

2004 – Emory is awarded funding from the CDC to establish a Prevention Research Center focused on cancer. Its community partner is the Southwest Georgia Cancer Coalition, representing 22 rural counties in Southwest Georgia.

2004 – Emory is awarded funding from the CDC to establish a Prevention Research Center focused on cancer. Its community partner is the Southwest Georgia Cancer Coalition, representing 22 rural counties in Southwest Georgia.

2004 – PhD programs are established in Behavioral Sciences and Health Education, and in Health Policy and Management.

2006 – The Hubert Department of Global Health becomes the first department at Emory to be named and endowed.

May 2008 – Groundbreaking is held for the Claudia Nance Rollins Building.

2009 – Emory University establishes an endowed chair in honor of Rollins School of Public Health Dean James W. Curran. The recognition marks the first time Emory has endowed a chair for a sitting dean. Curran and his successors will be known as the James W. Curran Dean of Public Health.

2009 – Dean’s conference room in the Claudia Nance Rollins Building is named in honor of Rollins School of Public Health’s founding dean Raymond S. Greenberg, MD, PhD.

October 6, 2010 – Claudia Nance Rollins Building is dedicated.

Programs Offered

The School of Public Health offers two master degree programs (Master of Public Health, Master of Science in Public Health) and eight dual degree programs (MBA-MPH, MD-MPH, MSN-MPH, MMSC(PA)-MPH, DPT-MPH, MDiv-MPH, MTS-MPH and JD-MPH). In addition, the School offers an MPH via distance education, two 5-year BA/MPH and BA/MSPH programs with Emory College, and a Masters of Science in Clinical Research in conjunction with the School of Medicine. Continuing education/certificate programs in a variety of disciplines are offered throughout the year.

Programs Offered cont'd

The School of Public Health, through the Graduate School, offers doctoral programs in Epidemiology, Biostatistics, Behavioral Sciences and Health Education, Health Policy and Health Services Research and collaborates with the School of Medicine in offering a doctoral degree in Nutrition and Health Sciences.

YERKES NATIONAL PRIMATE RESEARCH CENTER

Established 1930

Historical Dates

1930 – Yale psychobiologist Robert M. Yerkes, PhD, founded the Yale Anthropoid Experiment Station, later known as the Yale Laboratories of Primate Biology. Following Yerkes' retirement, the center was renamed in his honor.

1956 – Yale University transferred ownership of the Yerkes Laboratory of Primate Biology to Emory University.

1960 – Congress passed legislation creating the National Institutes of Health's Regional Primate Research Centers program to provide the scientific community with specialized resources needed for primate research. The next year, Emory and six other research universities were selected as sites for the regional primate research centers.

1965 – Federal funding enabled Emory to construct primate housing, lab and support facilities on its main campus and at a satellite location in Lawrenceville, Georgia. This same year, the Yerkes Research Center moved to Atlanta and has served ever since as a focal point for crossdisciplinary collaboration in research both within Emory and with affiliated scientists at other institutions across the country and the world.

1985 – The Yerkes Research Center received full accreditation from The Council on Accreditation of the Assessment and Accreditation of Laboratory Animal Care International (AAALAC), the gold standard of laboratory animal care. Yerkes has maintained full AAALAC accreditation for 26 consecutive years.

1999 – The Yerkes facility was expanded to accommodate the newly established Emory Vaccine Center, to facilitate vaccine development and research in AIDS, malaria, hepatitis C and other infectious diseases. This same year, the Yerkes Research Center became the first home for the newly formed Center for Behavioral Neuroscience (CBN), which provided resources to foster innovative research on the basic neurobiology of complex social behaviors associated with fear, aggression, affiliation and reproduction.

2001 – The DNA vaccine microbiologist Harriet Robinson, PhD, developed was shown to prevent development of AIDS in monkeys infected with a highly virulent form of HIV. Today, this vaccine is in clinical trials in humans. This same year, memory expert Stuart Zola, PhD, came to Emory from UC San Diego to become director of the Yerkes Research Center.

2002 – The NIH designated the Yerkes Research Center and seven other primate research centers as national primate research centers in recognition of their involvement with and impact on research programs worldwide.

2003 – The Yerkes Research Center became a critical component of the Southeastern Regional Center of Excellence for Emerging Infections and Biodefense, a federally funded initiative to develop new vaccines, drugs and diagnostic tests against emerging infections and to defend against organisms that might be used in bioterrorist attacks.

2004 – The Yerkes Research Center opened a new 92,000-square-foot neuroscience research building with state-of-the-art lab and imaging facilities currently used by scientists throughout the university. The Yerkes Research Center is the only center to have onsite MRI, PET and cyclotron facilities. The center has invested more than $3 million in imaging capabilities to facilitate neuroscience research projects involving studies of anatomy, physiology and function.

2005 – The Yerkes Research Center celebrated its 75th anniversary of advancing science and improving health.

2007 – The National Institute of Aging granted Yerkes researchers more than $10 million during a five-year period to compare changes that occur in normal aging humans, humans with Alzheimer's disease and humans with mild cognitive impairment to changes that occur in nonhuman primates. The goal is to identify ways to diagnose aging-related diseases earlier in order to increase the chances for effective treatment as well as to develop new treatments based on specific physiological changes. This is the largest grant Yerkes has ever received.

2008 – In the first study of its kind, Yerkes researchers developed the first transgenic nonhuman primate model of Huntington's disease (HD). This development is expected to lead to greater understanding of the underlying biology of HD and to the development of potential therapies. This same year, Yerkes opened a multi-purpose building at its field station in Lawrenceville. Certified LEED Gold, the CVMAR as it's known is the cornerstone for programs using social colonies of genetically typed nonhuman primates to help researchers understand the interaction between genetics and environment and the roles they play in human health and disease.

2009 – Three Yerkes researchers received highest honors for their work to advance science and improve health. Yerkes director Dr. Stuart Zola and researcher Larry Young, PhD, were selected as fellows of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, an honor the organization's members bestow upon their peers. Dr. Young also received one of only four McKnight Technological Innovations in Neuroscience awards this year. Kerry Ressler, MD, PhD, was also recognized for his contributions with the prestigious Freedman Award, which the National Alliance for Research on Schizophrenia and Depression presents annually.

2010 – The National Institutes of Health awarded Emory University $6.6 million to support a Morris K. Udall Center of Excellence in Parkinson's Disease Research to facilitate collaboration among researchers who will focus on developing more effective Parkinson's disease treatments with fewer side effects. Yerkes Researcher Thomas Wichmann, MD, is the principal investigator of the new center.

Research Programs

For eight decades, the Yerkes National Primate Research Center, Emory University, has been dedicated to conducting essential basic science and translational research to advance scientific understanding and to improve the health and well-being of humans and nonhuman primates. Today, the center, as one of only eight National Institutes of Health-funded national primate research centers, provides leadership, training and resources to foster scientific creativity, collaboration and discoveries. Yerkes-based research is grounded in scientific integrity, expert knowledge, respect for colleagues, an open exchange of ideas and compassionate quality animal care.

Within the fields of microbiology and immunology, neurologic diseases, neuropharmacology, behavioral, cognitive and developmental neuroscience, and psychiatric disorders, Yerkes research programs are seeking ways to: develop vaccines for infectious and noninfectious diseases; increase understanding of progressive illnesses such as Alzheimer's and Parkinson's diseases; unlock the secrets of memory; treat drug addiction; interpret brain activity through imaging; determine how the interaction between genetics and society shape who we are; and advance knowledge about the evolutionary links between biology and behavior.

Information About Libraries

The Libraries of Emory University include the Robert W. Woodruff Library, as well as libraries for health sciences, law, theology, business and Oxford College. Holdings of the Emory Libraries total approximately 3.6 million print and electronic volumes, more than 50,000-plus electronic journals, and internationally renowned special collections including more than 25,000 linear feet of manuscripts and archives.

Emory’s Manuscript, Archives and Rare Book Library (MARBL) offers rich collections in areas such as the Irish literary revival, 20th Century American, British and Irish poetry, and African-American literature, history and culture. MARBL also is strong in research collections devoted to the social and cultural history of the American South, with a particular emphasis on Georgia and Atlanta.

The libraries offer access to thousands of electronic information resources, including in-house digital innovations such as The Trans-Atlantic Slave Trade Database (<http://www.slavevoyages.org>), the Internet journal Southern Spaces (www.southernspaces.org), and the Global Health Chronicles (<http://globalhealthchronicles.org>).

LIBRARIES

Pitts Theology Library, the third-largest theology library in the country, is home to the Richard C. Kessler Reformation Collection. The Woodruff Health Sciences Center Library includes branches at Grady Hospital and Emory Hospital. Emory University’s Hugh F. MacMillan Law Library is a selective depository for U.S. government documents, and is a full depository for publications of the European Union.

The Emory Libraries are members of the Association of Research Libraries, OCLC, the Center for Research Libraries, the Coalition for Networked Information, and the Digital Library Federation. For more information about the libraries and strategic plan, visit <http://web.library.emory.edu>.

2008 – UTS completes major reorganization to meet future needs of Emory.

About UTS:

University Technology Services (UTS) enables Emory to teach, learn, and innovate by providing stable information technology services. UTS provides enterprise services to Emory University and Emory Healthcare including administrative applications (PeopleSoft), email and calendaring (Exchange), and 24 hour support services (call center and data center). UTS also provides telephone, wireless and wired data networking, paging, cable television, and radio and video services to the Emory enterprise.

Additionally, UTS provides many academically focused technology resources and applications (Blackboard) and support for over 100 technology enriched classrooms. UTS's computing centers and labs include Emory's award-winning Center for Interactive Teaching (ECIT). Collaborative work is enabled for students and faculty in the Computing Center at Cox Hall.

UTS is organized into the following groups:

- Academic Services
- Call Center
- Enterprise Services
- Infrastructure
- Enterprise Applications
- Integration
- Project Management
